LA County Water Plan

Ushering in a New Era of Collaboration

The LA County Water Plan has been adopted. The Plan is the product of three years of meetings between water agencies, local and tribal leaders, community members, and advocacy groups. It has been acclaimed by agencies and environmentalists alike. This first-ever countywide plan sets a high bar decreeing a shift from importing 60 percent of our water to locally sourcing 80 percent of our water by 2045 which is an increase of 580,000 acre-feet of new water.

All acknowledge that the goals cannot be met without the collaboration of multiple stakeholders. Join the Water Dialogue as LA County's Lee Alexanderson shares details of the Plan and learn why it has the potential to move from aspirational to achievable. To discuss how a neighboring county is moving beyond aspiration to implementation will be Heather Dyer of San Bernardino Valley MWD. Many of their multi-benefit projects serve as a prototypes of multi-stakeholder collaboration for county and regional benefits.

Speakers:

- Lee Alexanderson, Project Manager, Los Angeles County Water Plan, Los Angeles County Public Works
- Heather Dyer, Chief Executive Officer and General Manager, San Bernardino County Municipal Water District
